DETAILED ACTION

1. Applicant's amendment and election in response to the restriction requirement, received February 10, 2003, is acknowledged and entered. Applicant has elected Group VII, claims 29-36 and 45-58. Claims 29-36 and 45-58 are pending and examined on the merits.

Claim Objections

2. Claim 55 is objected to because of the following grammatical error: "comprises" should be "comprising".

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 29-36 and 45-58 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Tardei et al (J. Clin. Micro., 38:2232-2239, June 2000) in view of Khromykh et al (J. Virol., 72:5967-5977, July 1998) and Houghton et al (5,350,671). The claims are drawn to a method and kit for identifying individuals exposed to flavivirus (West Nile) or pestivirus. The method uses antibodies that specifically bind to the capsid (or core) protein, and alternatively, the capsid itself. If binding between the antibody/antigen is detected, then exposure to flavivirus or pestivirus is confirmed. An additional quantifying step may be taken in the assay.

Art Unit: 1648

Tardei discloses an ELISA method for detecting West Nile virus infection with antibodies to WN antigens (abstract). The method is used to detect infection in patients. The antigens are propagated in Vero cells (page 2232, column 2, last paragraph). Tardei is silent on the specific antigens' used to detect antibodies.

Khromykh discloses antibodies that bind specifically to the C protein of flavivirus Kunjin virus (abstract, and figure 2 caption).

It would have been obvious to incorporate the C protein of a flavivirus, and in particular WNV, into the method of Tardei. One would have been motivated to use the C protein because Houghton discloses methods of immunoassay for detecting antibodies to flavivirus Hepatitis C virus capsid protein. Houghton says that antigens in the C portion of HCV and other flaviviruses should provide diagnostic reagents (col. 30, lines 45-54). One would have had a reasonable expectation of success that the C protein or antibodies to C protein would detect exposure because Houghton detects exposure based on the C protein of HCV.

Therefore, the invention as a whole would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).
